Amicore launches as AI consultancy for legal industry

NEW YORK (January 26, 2026) — Technology specialists Kevin Spellman and Charlie Altenbach announced today the launch of Amicore, a consultancy that will provide artificial intelligence advisory and implementation services for law firms and legal departments.

The company will focus on helping legal teams evaluate, adopt and manage AI tools for document processing, workflow automation and internal knowledge access. Spellman and Altenbach said the goal is to offer practical guidance for firms seeking to incorporate emerging technologies without disrupting existing operations.

“Many legal teams are interested in AI but unsure how to deploy it responsibly,” Spellman said. “Amicore was created to support that transition with clear assessments and reliable execution.”

Altenbach said the firm will work with clients to configure secure, firm-specific systems and provide training and ongoing support. He noted that the company aims to align new tools with each organization’s existing procedures and accuracy requirements.
